TOO MUCH NIGGERISM.

The late Secretary Seward, or ex-Judge Russell, or Squire Moore, or all of them, have said that "no one who spells negro with two g's would ever be President of the United States." And really it matters little which of the three made the remark. or indeed if all have so said.

The first, after "life's" fitful fever" sleeps, without having attained the great object of his ambition, however he may have spelt negro.

The second is "fretting and strutting his brief hour upon the stage." literally as well as metaphorically, and the only chance he has for the Presidency, or indeed a Magistracy, or even a Constableship is from the support of the "double g" negroes. And possibly he may have beard of could never be President, that this coat tail bung too near the ground," and has dispaired notwithstanding a fanitiess orthography in

And the last, a "tale told by an idiot," finds his chances for the Presidency or Magistracy or Constableship, not a whit better than the other, and depending also upon the "double g's," although he is not noted for spelling any particular word by any very well defined rule, though the ridiculous am bition of the last two, may of late years, have caused them to be partial to the "single g" orthographly of that very delicate word-negro.
